Manuscript Development Assignment
Curriculum and Instruction in Workforce Education

1. In a paper on ten (10) or more pages (12 point font, APA format) write a manuscript which has not been published before and submit it to the Online Journal of Workforce Education and Development at <http://journalforworkforceeducation.org> . The topic must fall within the general parameters of curriculum and instruction in workforce education, but may deal with any subject matter in education for work. Specifics of submission can be found on the web site.
2. The number of revisions required before publication is unimportant, but the author must be notified of publication before full credit for the assignment will be given.
3. The manuscript may deal with any subject within the above parameters, but must outline a theoretical position and refer to literature and research in the field. A bibliography must be included with the manuscript.
4. The manuscript can describe original research, review research on a particular topic within the above parameters, propose a new consideration or organization such as a new curriculum or instructional model, or describe the historical development of the topic or subject under discussion. Quantitative, qualitative or historical research techniques may be used or referenced, but must be used appropriately.
5. The due date for submission to the Journal is the last week before Spring Break, on March 9, 2007. Submission should follow the procedure listed on the web page of the Journal. No hard copy will be accepted. Feedback after submission normally requires approximately one week.. In the case of rejection, you may revise and resubmit.
6. Manuscripts may be the work of single authors or may have more than one author. For the purpose of this assignment there is no difference in credit between single and joint authored manuscripts. All authors will be accredited equally.
7. An outline of your proposed manuscript is due by January 30, 2007. Outlines may either be submitted by e-mail to me or by hard copy. All assignments are welcome before the final due date.
