Journal Research in Education for Work

1. Access and review several journals in an area, or areas, dealing with education for work. The journals may be either hard copy or on-line. Find a good example of a report of quantitative research, a good example of a report of qualitative research and a good example of a report on historical research. The articles should deal with some aspect of curriculum or instruction in area(s) of your expertise.
2. Submit copies of the abstract or title page and bibliographies for each article chosen. You do not need to write a summary of the studies.
3. Prepare a very brief report of the 3 articles for presentation to the class. Tell us what the problem was, what the method of investigation was, and what was learned.
4. Due:
